Practical wisdom (φρόνησις/phrónēsis)

Practical wisdom (φρόνησις/phrónēsis)

“ ... practical wisdom cannot be a science [episteme] or art [techne]; not science because what can be done is variable ... and not art because ... production aims at an end other than itself; but ... in the case of action ... the end is merely doing well”. (NE1140a24- b12)

Questions

- (I) How can this approach based on Western philosophy be enriched/questioned from philosophies from other cultures and geographies?
- (II) How can we embed practical wisdom in curricula and training to enhance our capacities (as researchers) to contribute to transformative processes?
- (III) How can we design and run organisations, institutions, and spaces that support pluralism through practical wisdom in research contexts ?

Thanks!!!!
